Use your skills.
Share your knowledge.
Become a Surveyor.

About our surveyors

CARF surveyors conduct an accreditation process that distinguishes human services providers for their focus on quality and outcomes. CARF surveyors are an integral part of the accreditation process and the industry's most knowledgeable and respected experts in the fields of rehabilitation and human services.

CARF is committed to ensuring diversity among its surveyors. Having a varied surveyor cadre allows CARF to match the characteristics of its surveyors to those of the organizations being surveyed. CARF is particularly interested in surveyor diversity with respect to disabilities, culture, age, gender, sexual orientation, spiritual beliefs, socioeconomic status, and language. CARF is particularly interested in versatile candidates who have experience working in multiple programs.

Qualifications

CARF recruits individuals from CARF-accredited organizations. Applications are being accepted for individuals with expertise and backgrounds in the following areas:

Aging Services

- All areas

Behavioral Health

- All areas

Child and Youth Services

- All areas, with a particular focus on child welfare

Employment and Community Services

- Autism
- Hard of hearing
- Vision Rehabilitation Services

Medical Rehabilitation

- Residential Rehabilitation
- Vocational
- Home and Community Services
- Brain Injury
- Pediatric Specialty

Benefits

Benefits of becoming a surveyor include:

- Contribute to quality of services provided to persons served
- Opportunity for professional networking
- Exposure to national and international trends and best practices in the field
- Complimentary CARF publications, including standards manuals
- Complimentary registration fees at most CARF-sponsored events
- Continuing education opportunities
- Recognition of personal achievement and excellence in the field

For more information on becoming a surveyor visit www.carf.org/About/BecomeaSurveyor carf CANADA